Safety Week: Day 2 - Eye Problems and Prevention

"Keeping your body healthy is an expression of gratitude to the whole cosmos."

Little Scholars School organized an awareness session on Eye problems and its prevention in the ongoing safety week of 2024. The session was conducted by none other than Dr. Amrita Chauhan, an Ex-Student of Little Scholars from the 2003 batch and a renowned Ophthalmologist with a Fellowship in Intraocular surgery and medical retina.

Dr. Amrita led a session for students of classes 3-8 in the auditorium, followed by an interactive discussion on eye wellness, educating and guiding students on how to take care of their eye health in this digital age.

She emphasized that staring at digital screens for too long can lead to tired, itchy, dry eyes, and even blurred vision and headaches, especially in children who spend prolonged periods playing games on mobile phones. She highlighted the risks of high refractive errors and eye infections due to constant screen exposure and eye rubbing.

Dr. Amrita recommended annual eye check-ups and suggested precautions such as using anti-reflective glasses or screens, frequent blinking, consuming fresh green and red/orange vegetables and fruits, and following the 20-20-20 rule.

Students showed immense interest and received personalized solutions to their eye-related concerns, making the session both knowledgeable and inspiring.

Safety Week: Day 3- Good Touch and Bad Touch

The objective of this activity was to educate students about the concepts of good touch and bad touch, empowering them with the knowledge and skills to recognize and respond appropriately to different types of touch. The session began with Komalpreet Goraya and Samridhhi Pandey of Class 12th A explaining the importance of understanding good touch and bad touch. They emphasized that knowing the difference between the two can help keep students safe and protect their well-being.

The students of Class 12th defined good touch as any touch that feels comfortable, safe, and respectful. Examples include hugs from family members, pats on the back, or handshakes.

They also defined bad touch as any touch that feels uncomfortable, scary, or inappropriate. Examples include unwanted touching of private parts, hitting, or invading personal space without permission.

This activity aimed to foster a safe and supportive learning environment while equipping students with the knowledge and skills necessary to navigate personal boundaries and interactions with others.

Safety week: Day 4- Blood Donation Camp

We organized an educational session on Blood group testing.

This initiative not only aimed to collect blood but also to raise awareness about the importance of regular blood donation and its life-saving impact. Under the guidance of Mrs. Meenakshi Rastogi, Biology teacher, her students – Gurmil Kaur, Ritika, and Himani – took the lead in conducting blood group tests.

Utilizing blood typing kits, they demonstrated their knowledge of antigens and antibodies in a practical setting, testing the blood groups of volunteers, including parents, teachers, and fellow students.

The students employed a range of equipment for this process, including Antisera A, B, and D (which contain antibodies), slides, prickers, Dettol, and cotton. By observing the clumping (agglutination) of red blood cells, they were able to accurately identify the blood groups of the participants. This hands-on activity not only provided them with invaluable practical experience but also reinforced their theoretical understanding of blood typing. It was a great exposure to the students.

This initiative exemplified the school's commitment to blending academic knowledge with real-world applications, fostering both community spirit and educational growth.

Little Scholars Unleash Eco-Magic: Rescuing Finn Weaver Birds

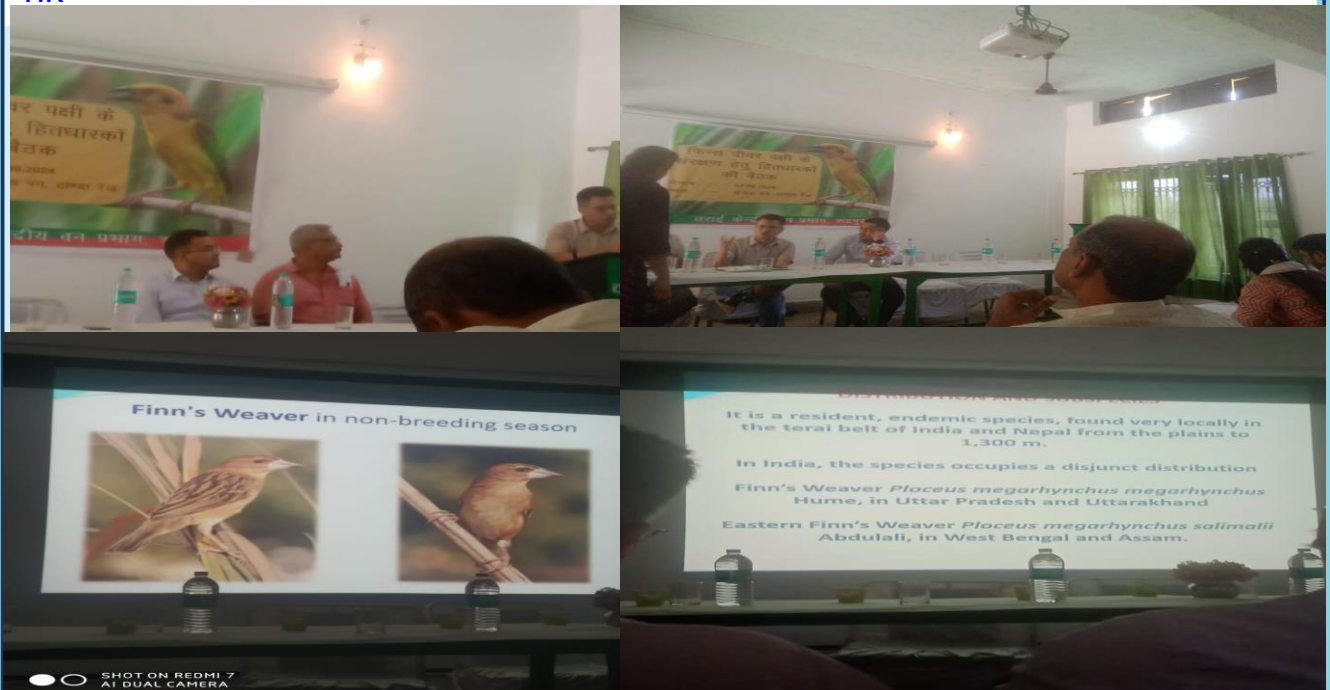

In a pivotal gathering convened by the Forest Department, NSI, and BNHS, the looming threat of Finn Weaver bird extinction took center stage. Discussions pulsated with strategies for habitat restoration, anti-poaching measures, and community engagement, aiming to ignite conservation awareness.

Enter Swarnim Gairola and Lakshya Bisht from Little Scholars, whose impassioned plea for action reverberated profoundly. Swarnim, a 10th-grade luminary, ignited the room with a bold proposition inspired by Corbett National Park's tiger conservation success. Proposing seasonal closures to pinpoint sustainable breeding grounds for the Finn Weaver, he stirred the imagination of all present. However, he cautioned against the risk of time slipping away, highlighting the urgency of immediate action amid the complex challenge.

Meanwhile, the spotlight turned to Mr. Pankaj Bhalla, tasked with presenting the sustainable aqua project. Drawing parallels with the plight of the Gularbojh Dam, Mr. Bhalla unveiled the harrowing tale of habitat loss due to human intervention, encroachment, and quarrying of river belts. The students' diligent study under the sustainable aqua project underscored the dire need for holistic conservation efforts to safeguard delicate ecosystems crucial for these endangered birds.

Their insightful contributions left an indelible mark, offering hope and direction in the fight to save the Finn Weaver. The seeds of change have been sown, heralding a new dawn of conservation action.

"ADJUSTMENT WITH PEOPLE"

A pursuit to making healthy relationships

There are many people who are excellent at managing work, they are intelligent and successful but the same people are failures when it comes to managing relationships, weather it is with their parents, siblings spouses all with a children. What is the reason for this failure? Why doesn't there intelligence for qualification help them to manage their relationships wisely?The answer to this lies in understanding and accepting that he is skills required for healthy relationship or totally different from the skills required for success in work and learning. A person who works with the machines has to have two types of skills, one is about the machine and the other is about professional interaction with colleagues- managers and junior colleagues. Both are equally important. Whereas, developing and maintaining healthy relationships - both with family and in professional life - requires skills in the art of life management the art of life management refers to two things - one is to understand one cell and other is to be aware of the world around us. Understanding oneself refers to knowing once capabilities; and being aware of the world around us reference to knowing about human nature and the creation plan of God for humankind. With this knowledge one may plan one's life in a realistic manner and make improvements whenever and wherever required to have successful relationships why should give precedence to using reason over emotions even in blood relation ships rational management is important rational management has to be cultivated through conscious efforts.

Every human being is endowed with certain uniqueness. This difference itself is not evil; there is great benefit hidden in it. Differences should be seen as representing different capabilities. If everyone had uniform capabilities, they would be able to achieve little. Accepting others' uniqueness as beneficial is the first skill in cultivating good human relationships. At the very foundation of human life, another basic skill to be continuously nurtured is the skill of living a purposeful life. It is strange as it is so very important. Without a purpose, human kind will not have any motivation to avoid unnecessary conflicts with others. Purpose gives direction and a plan which includes maintaining good relationships with people who we deal with so that any unpleasantness with others does not become an obstacle to the achievement of one's goals. Cracks in relationships are often caused by "unnatural expectations" and these must be avoided. We have to pay the price of anything basic in this world. For example, if you want to enjoy certain comforts, you have to work for it. If you want to make good use of a gadget, you have to pay in terms of doing whatever it calls for. Maintenance is the law of nature. Anyone who only wants something but is not ready to pay the price has an unnatural desire which will never be fulfilled. Another unnatural desire common among people is to wish that they have or had a perfect spouse, perfect children, or a father like their friend has, etc. Such thinking is unrealistic. No one is perfect or ideal. No one is an embodiment of all good qualities. It is a law of nature that if one has some particular good qualities, he will be lacking in others. It is the tendency of man to look at the negative aspects of people rather than their positive tendency, which comes in the way of good relationships..

The above understanding leads to the question of how to control anger. The good news is that it can be done. The law of nature regarding anger is that it gets activated only for 30 seconds and if it is checked it gets diffused like a balloon. Therefore if a person checks his anger and does not allow it to flare up, the negative feeling will ebb away naturally without there being any negative outcome.. The only thing we should do is to learn these things provided by nature and apply them in our lives. The way of nature is silent communication. Those who can understand this language will be able to listen to the voice of nature and benefit from it. Adopting "wait and watch" policy is another skill which can help us with our relationship. Full stop. The policy of waiting refers to waiting for a better future: waiting for tomorrow to bring something we have not received today. This is undoubtedly a matter of great wisdom, as it is possible that you may receive tomorrow what you have not received today. People often make the mistake of desiring other things to come up to their expectations immediately or instantly. They ignore the need for time. It is not possible in this world to find today what you are not destined to find until tomorrow. Full stop. It is only after waiting that one receives what one is waiting for. This is another law of nature and no law is greater in this world than the law of nature. To sum up, one can say that to live in harmony with people, one should adopt a realistic approach, look at things in a broad perspective, accept the uniqueness of each one including ours, and understand human nature and most important of all, live in accordance with it, our souls which means being 'complex free souls'.

"Whispers of the Wild"

In the heart of the forest, where shadows play, Whispering trees in a green ballet. The sunlight filters through leaves so bright,
Kissing the ground in dappled light.

Moss carpets the floor, soft and deep,
Where the secrets of the wild creatures sleep. Ancient oaks and pines so tall, Stand as guardians, silent and tall.

Birdsong weaves through the air, A symphony pure, beyond compare. Eagles soar with wings spread wide, While deer in the glen gracefully glide.

A rustle in the underbrush, swift and sleek,
The fox emerges, red fur unique. Bears lumber through with a powerful grace, In this sanctuary, a sacred place.

Streams meander, crystal and clear,
Quenching the thirst of all who come near.
Frogs croak and fish leap high, Under the watch of the azure sky.

The night descends with a cloak of stars, Owls hoot softly, near and far. The moon, a guardian in silver light, Guides the forest through the night.

In this realm where nature thrives, A tapestry of countless lives. Each creature, plant, and tree, Part of a wild, eternal symphony.

Respect the forest, heed its call, For it sustains us, one and all. Preserve the wild, let it be, A haven for all, eternally free.
